army basic training graduation 2023: Too Nice Nickolas Fincher, 2023-02-21 I decided on the title Too Nice because many people throughout my life have always told me that I'm too nice. I will do anything to help anyone, and I am also too stubborn to give up on anyone. I'm too nice because I choose to see the best in people even when they can't see it in themselves. I always thought it was kind of sad to live in a world where too nice could be considered a fault rather than a favor. Still, there are many of us that are thankful to be blessed with friends and family who are too nice to us at times. Seeing the state of the things in our world between climate, politics, and war, it only made logical sense to share my story with the world. I know there must be a lot of scared people out there, but please believe me, if we truly accept God and are solid in our faith, then we have nothing to fear. I have hope that those that can read the true story about my life and my suffering will come to know the grace of God. Even if only one person comes to understand and accept God by reading my book, my mission will be a success. I know there are many people out there who are just like myself. This book and the several that will follow will help us better understand our purpose in life as it pertains to God.

army basic training graduation 2023: Russian Nuclear Orthodoxy Dmitry Adamsky, 2023-05-25 A richly documented analysis of the post-Soviet nexus between religion, nationalism, and nuclear weapons . . . An important, pioneering work! —David Holloway, Stanford University A nuclear priesthood has arisen in Russia. From portable churches to the consecration of weapons systems, the Russian Orthodox Church has been integrated into every facet of the armed forces to become a vital part of Russian national security, politics, and identity. This extraordinary intertwining of church and military is nowhere more visible than in the nuclear weapons community, where the priesthood has penetrated all levels of command and the Church has positioned itself as a guardian of the state's nuclear potential. Russian Nuclear Orthodoxy considers how, since the Soviet collapse in 1991, the Church has worked its way into the nuclear forces of one of the world's most powerful militaries. Dmitry Adamsky describes how the Orthodox faith has merged with Russian national identity as the Church continues to expand its influence on foreign and domestic politics. The Church both legitimizes and influences Moscow's assertive national security strategy in the twenty-first century. This book highlights the implications of this phenomenon for international security, and interrogates how the confluence of religion and security could influence other members of the nuclear club, beyond Russia.

army basic training graduation 2023: Face of the Enemy: An American Asian's War in Vietnam and at Home David O. Chung, Kerry O'Connell, 2023-08-23 Face of the Enemy is not your run-of-the-mill memoir. The second son of a mixed-race family of mainly Asian descent was challenge enough. His father's American values were overpowered by his mother's enforcement of the traditional Chinese culture of her homeland. His home life couldn't have been more dissimilar than the culture of 1960s Chicago that was just outside his front door. Out on the streets, his Asian face said, "I'm not one of you." At home, his status as the Number Two son said, "I am a servant." Chung, Doc to his friends, quickly learned that he had two identities, and that he was trapped in between them. He had to fight, many times with his fists, to discover where his place was in his own country. The Vietnam War was winding down when Chung joined the Air Force. As a transportation specialist for the United States Air Force in Vietnam, he made sure aircraft delivering supplies were loaded and balanced properly. How much trouble could there be? Plenty, as he discovered. Many of his American comrades in arms viewed him with suspicion. He had the face of the enemy. The Vietnamese took one look at his American uniform and knew he was not one of them. After coming home from Vietnam, Doc found his own country struggling to move on from an unpopular war. The public blamed the veterans, some of whom were struggling with the demons they had brought home with them. The only defense from the public shaming was for veterans to hide in plain sight. Uniforms were packed away. Nightmares weren't talked about. The only thing that remained the same for Doc was the racism and bigotry. How do you overcome having the face of the enemy? How do you free yourself from the jaws of a trap that is part of who you are? Doc found the answer in saying yes. Saying yes to joining a fledgling company called Federal Express. Saying yes to joining veterans groups to help change the way Vietnam veterans were treated. Saying yes to the journey of driving the Vietnam Women's Memorial across the country to Washington DC. Saying yes to a position in the Veterans Affairs Office in Washington DC. Saying yes to changing his own life through helping others. This is a memoir of an ordinary man with an extraordinary conviction to change the status quo, first through activism, and then through an uncanny understanding of how to navigate the bureaucratic obstacles of the United States government.

army basic training graduation 2023: Applied Moral Education in Korea Brendan M. Howe, John Gyun Yeol Park, 2025-08-28 Education is a human right, but it also serves a practical function of improving the performance of domestic and international governance. Those who govern have an obligation to provide conditions of peace and security, to reconcile conflicts of interest, and to generate collective good, all while abiding by the rule of law. Those who are governed likewise have obligations, firstly towards their fellow citizens, but also to conceptualizations of the wider body politic, to the collective good, and towards those who govern in the interests of society through resolving collective action problems. Education is key to training those who would govern, but also to training citizens to recognize when the instruments of government (both actors and institutions) fail to adhere to the principles of good governance. Furthermore, education provides the foundation for concepts of good citizenship among civil society. The chapters in this edited collection reflect upon the myriad ways in which supporting education and capacity-building training programs can not only bring benefit to the recipients, but also to the wider communities to which they belong. These include building resilience through empowering civil society, promoting democratic governance through civic education, building peace within and between societies, using education and training as tools of development, the public diplomacy role of educational scholarships, and the internationalization of learning environments. The transformative nature of principled education can have a remarkable impact when applied to policy platforms within the state and beyond its borders. This is a rare insight into the purpose and value of education in the Republic of Korea, and will be a useful addition to any collection supporting studies in education and Asian Studies. It is supported by the Korean Association for Public Value.
